

History, made usable again.

A Glasgow-based developer working only on historic structures — returning cast stone and old timber to working life without erasing a century of wear.

Inverchaoalin Church

A 1877 Free Church re-opened as a community hall. Roof slate lifted and relaunched; the original cast-iron fittings were conserved in place rather than replaced.

02 MULL OF KINTYRE • 2022

Ardnadam Pier

A Victorian working pier returned to the sea. Concrete re-pointing matched to the original aggregate; a new timber walkway carries foot traffic off the historic pier face.

03 ARDNAMURCHAN • 2024

Ardnadam Reservoir

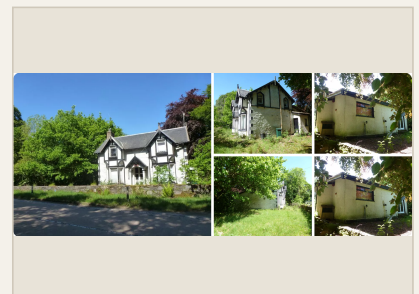

A 1903 water supply scheme stabilised and given a public edge. Weir stonework cleaned in lime; a viewing platform cantilevers over the spillway.

Inverreck Cottage

A 19th-century blackhouse cottage brought back into use. Stone walls were re-pointed in lime, the slate roof rebuilt, and a discreet timber extension added to the rear.

Patina in, joinery in.

We treat weathering as a record, not a defect. Where a wall has taken a century of rain, we leave it. Where a building needs to work again, we add clean, contemporary joinery beside it — never against it.

01 Conservate, then extend

New use is added around the old, not poured over it. The historic fabric is the load-bearing story of the building.

02 Materials read as time

Lime mortars, cast stone, reclaimed timber. New work is legible from a distance and honest up close.

03 Built with the community

Parish councils, heritage bodies and local trades are consulted from the first survey, not the final approval.
